YOHO Welcomes Mary Blum

If a mass of color and light were to shatter and fall together in an orderly, decorative fashion, the result would be strikingly similar to Mary Blum's artwork. Her designs celebrate simplicity and radiance, combining acrylic color with metallic details on canvas to create attainable subjects that are fitting for any space.

With a passion for the history and creation of art at the core of her every venture, Mary Blum is a graduate of both Wheaton College and Hartford Art School and has assisted in research at Yale, the Wadsworth Atheneum Matrix Gallery, and CUNY Graduate Center. She exhibits internationally, has occupied artist studio buildings throughout New England and beyond, and chose 700 square-foot Unit 524 at YoHo for its beautiful, bright, and functional space, and its location within a "dynamic and professional group of artists."

"My neighbors have all been extremely warm and sharing," Mary explains. "Every interface, from the staff to the superintendent, has been outstanding."
