YOHO Artist Spotlight: Leslie Jordan

Leslie Jordan

Leslie Jordan's imagination ran wild from a young age. From illustrating her own books to planting glass shards with hopes of growing glass flowers, she believed anything was possible.

Drawing and painting became her passion. She attended School of Visual Arts for a few semesters, and was in awe of many forms of media, including film, sculpture, painting and architecture. A creative exploration ensued, leading her to find her true artistic path through photography.

Jordan is a fine arts photographer who explores any subject set before her. With her lens and imagination, she experiments and takes the visual world to new a level, resulting in creating an image that will engage and inspire the observer. She came upon YoHo Artist Studios when she was looking for a studio within an artist community. After researching a few buildings in the area, Jordan found that the location, size and community at YoHo were just what she was looking for, and she signed the lease the day after her visit.

Jordan is inspired by the world that surrounds her. Walks around cities and towns, or exploring the raw beauty of nature, the one constant of her creative journey is her camera. She is fascinated by crumbling rocks or by droplets of water, beautiful flowers, insects, and all aspects of the natural world. Her camera and equipment become the tools that capture a single moment of time.

Jordan's work can be viewed at www.lesliejordanarts.com. She has participated in YoHo Open Studios events, and works out of studio 414 at 578 Nepperhan Ave. To find out more about YoHo Artist Studios, visit www.yohoartists.org.
